

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An image processing apparatus that stores XML management information relating to a managed device and including a first group and a second group of management information, the image processing apparatus: when receiving from a terminal device a transmission request of data used for displaying a first group of management information, reading the management information, reading a first XSLT style sheet that is used for displaying the first group of management information from a first XSLT storage unit, and transmitting the management information and the first XSLT style sheet; and when receiving from the terminal device a transmission request of data used for displaying a second group of management information, reading from a second XSLT storage unit a second XSLT style sheet that is used for displaying the second group of management information, and transmitting the second XSLT style sheet.